Launch digital product in less than 24 hours:

I- market reality scan:

Prompt 1: I want to work on launching a new brand , but I need to look for the right market, so I need you to give me the markets that are doing well in digital products,and have great demand in the year 2026/2027 like : health,wealth,education …etc. Justify and arrange your choices

Digital product markets to target in 2026/2027, ranked

Assumptions: global, online-first audience; "digital products" means courses, templates, ebooks/guides, memberships and communities, apps, and AI tools.

How I ranked them. Each market was scored on five things that matter for a brand launching now:
1. Demand growth. Is the market expanding through 2027, or flat?
2. Willingness to pay. Do buyers pay for an outcome, or do they expect it free?
3. Speed to launch. Can a sellable first product ship in a day?
4. Room to stand out. Can a new brand still own a clear niche?
5. AI-proofing. Will free AI tools make the product worthless?

1. AI skills for work and business (Education, highest urgency)
What sells: "AI for [profession]" courses, prompt and workflow playbooks, automation templates, team training kits, cohort programs.
Why #1: This is the biggest change in what people need to learn right now. Workers and employers are racing to build AI skills (Axios, Coursera Job Skills Report 2026, CIO Dive on O'Reilly AI training demand). The pain is urgent and tied to income, which makes people willing to pay. It is also the fastest to launch, since you can teach a real workflow with a short video and a template pack.
Watch out: Generic "ChatGPT prompts" packs are saturated, and AI can produce them for free. Go narrow: AI for real estate agents, accountants, teachers, Etsy sellers, and so on.

2. Health and wellness, in specific niches (Health)
What sells: programs and trackers for GLP-1 users (protein, strength training, keeping weight off), women's health (perimenopause, hormones), sleep, stress and mental fitness, healthy-aging routines.
Why #2: This is the largest pool of consumer spending, with the overall health and wellness market projected at around $13T by 2031 (Chain Drug Review) and wellness apps still growing (Precedence Research). GLP-1 drugs created a brand-new audience that needs nutrition and fitness support (PwC, Sahha). People pay for transformation, and memberships keep them paying.

Why not #1: Health takes more trust to sell (credentials, results, testimonials), and medical claims carry legal risk. Expect slower conversion for a brand with no track record.

3. Personal finance and money skills (Wealth)
What sells: budget and debt-payoff spreadsheets and Notion templates, beginner investing guides, side-hustle and freelancing starter kits, small-business finance templates.
Why #3: Cost-of-living pressure keeps demand evergreen, and finance templates are among the most reliable sellers on Etsy and Gumroad (InsightAgent Etsy niches 2026). Templates can be built in hours and need no audience trust to try.
Why not higher: Lots of competition and low prices for templates. Anything that looks like investment advice brings regulatory risk. Margins are better if you bundle templates with a short course or community.

The chosen market → Wealth and personal Finance:

Debt payoff, with debt snowball as the main angle.

These are US Google searches a month, compared with a year ago:

- “debt snowball”: 12,100, the same as last year, and steady every month. It’s the most reliable demand in the market.
- “debt snowball spreadsheet”: 2,400, also flat, which shows people want the exact product you’d sell.
- “debt payoff”: 1,000. Interest has roughly doubled over the last 3 months.
- It’s year-round, not seasonal, so you can sell from day one.

- Market: Wealth and personal finance
- Niche: Debt payoff
- Sub-niche (your main angle): Debt snowball planners and trackers

You're right. "Debt snowball planner" (30 searches a month) and "debt snowball tracker" (210) are small on Google. That's because they're very specific long phrases, and they don't represent the whole niche. Look at the bigger terms in the same niche:

- debt snowball: 12,100 a month
- debt snowball calculator: 4,400
- debt snowball spreadsheet: 2,400
- credit card payoff calculator: 22,200

The main problems people describe:

1. "I don't know where to start." The most common post type is "I have $X in debt, what order do I pay it in?" People are confused by multiple cards and loans.
2. Overwhelm. "Felt overwhelming", "Desperate for advice". Big totals ($30k to $178k) freeze people.
3. Interest shock. "The interest alone was eating up more than my rent."
4. Losing motivation. Progress feels slow, and people quit halfway. What keeps them going: small early wins (the snowball) and seeing progress visually (whiteboards, charts).
5. Spreadsheets that are too complicated. People abandon trackers that take too long to set up or update. One quote: "I spent more time fixing broken cell references than thinking about my finances."
6. No emergency fund. One surprise expense puts them back on the cards.
7. Feeling broke even after paying off debt. They have no plan for what comes next.

What this means for your product:

- A "start here" page: list your debts, and the order to pay them is calculated for you.
- Dead-simple setup: under 5 minutes, locked formulas so nothing breaks.
- Visual progress: a coloring tracker, a progress bar, and a "debt-free date" countdown.
- A mini emergency fund tracker built in.
- A "what to do after debt" page as a bonus.

Reddit pain points: debt payoff (read directly, 2026-10-12)

Source: 1,875 posts pulled from r/debtfree, r/DaveRamsey, r/Debt, r/povertyfinance, r/personalfinance (top of year, top of month, newest, plus searches like "overwhelmed", "where do I start", "tracker", "spreadsheet", "motivation", "burnout"). Comments read on ~12 threads about trackers, minimum payments and motivation. Counts below come from the 427 unfiltered top/new posts (the search results would skew them). They are keyword matches, so treat them as rough.

Verdict on the earlier secondhand summary

Earlier claim	Reddit says
Don't know where to start / payoff order	Confirmed. Very common wording in help posts.
Overwhelm, shame	Confirmed, stronger than expected (16% of top/new posts). Panic attacks, "drowning", "burner account because I'm embarrassed".
Interest shock	Confirmed (26% mention interest/minimums). "Paying the minimum but balance isn't going down" is a classic.
Losing motivation	Confirmed, mostly in the middle of the journey ("65k down, 59k to go, I'm so fatigued").
Spreadsheets too complicated	Confirmed, with a twist: people want a spreadsheet, but one that does the math for them.
No emergency fund	Confirmed. Emergencies are the #1 cause of relapse.
No plan after debt	Weak. Shows up, but rarely. Not a main selling point.

New findings

1. Relapse cycle. People pay a card off, then an emergency puts it right back. "I find that even if I pay a card off an emergency happens and the balance is right back up again." "I consolidated my debt into a loan and then racked up my credit cards again."

2. Couples. 27% of top/new posts mention a spouse or partner. Hidden debt, one partner spending, "we're tackling this together". "I crumbled in secret under the weight of the debt." A couples version is a real angle.
3. Paycheck-based planning. People think in paychecks, not months: "broke it down by biweekly pay periods", "how do I know what I can spend if there is nothing left of my next three paychecks?"
4. Celebration is the culture. 55% of top posts are milestone or "debt free!" posts. Coloring trackers, crossing debts off, high-fives. "I put this on the wall in our room and look forward to coloring in that first column each month." "We crossed it off. That behavior just made it more special."
5. Visual progress and a debt-free date drive motivation. "Need the motivation of not only knowing when we will be debt free, but seeing the debt decline."
6. Math anxiety. "I am terrible with numbers and get very agitated and have panic attacks when I try to think this through." "Math isn't easy for me." "I'm not good with spreadsheets (or with my money)."
7. Competitors people name: undebt.it (most praised), Debt Payoff Planner app, EveryDollar, YNAB, Vertex42 free spreadsheet, the Ramsey Baby Steps app (discontinued, users annoyed), and an Etsy listing (exceltists "personal debt payoff calculator").
8. Halal caution. Many top replies push balance transfers, consolidation loans and HELOCs. Our products should not recommend those.

Best quotes for copy (verbatim)

- "I'm overwhelmed with all of this, and don't know where to start to climb out." (r/personalfinance)
- "Where do I start, I'm clearly too dumb to manage this myself." (r/debtfree)
- "I never missed a payment, but I was completely overwhelmed watching so much money disappear to interest while barely touching the principal." (r/debtfree)
- "Im paying my minimum payments but my balance isnt going down" (r/debtfree, post title)
- "I feel like I've barely started at this and I'm burnt out and over it." (r/debtfree)
- "Does anyone know where I can get a GOOD tracker with formulas that will keep a budget and help me see the effects of my debt?" (r/debtfree)

- "I use excel. Wish there was something less cumbersome." (r/debtfree)
- "I know what I want, it's just difficult finding it out there in the wild." (r/debtfree, looking for a multi-card spreadsheet)
- "I'm so over this feeling of drowning and almost weekly panic attacks." (r/debtfree)

What this means for the product

- Start Here tab: enter debts, it sorts them and shows the payoff order and debt-free date. No math by the user.
- Interest reality check: show "months to pay off at minimum" vs "with your plan", and interest saved. Speaks to the #1 shock.
- Per-paycheck view (weekly / biweekly / monthly) of how much goes to each debt.
- Emergency buffer line so one surprise bill doesn't restart the cycle.
- Printable coloring tracker + "debt killed" stickers/stamps for the celebration culture; a shareable milestone page fits Pinterest.
- Couples edition (two people, shared plan) as a second listing.
- Tone: no shame. "You're not dumb, the math is hidden from you."
- Skip "after debt" as a headline feature; keep it as a small bonus at most.

Interest shock

1. “I pay every month but my balance isn’t going down.”
2. “Most of my payment goes to interest, not the debt.”
3. “The interest costs me more than my rent.”
4. “I’ll be paying minimums forever.”

Overwhelm and shame

5. “I feel like I’m drowning in debt.”
6. “I’m too embarrassed to tell anyone how much I owe.”
7. “Thinking about my debt gives me panic attacks.”
8. “I feel stupid for letting it get this bad.”
9. “I avoid opening my bank app.”

Not knowing where to start

10. “I don’t know which debt to pay first.”
11. “I have too many cards and loans to keep track of.”
12. “Everyone gives different advice and I’m confused.”
13. “I don’t have a plan, I just pay whatever I can.”

The relapse cycle

14. “Every time I pay a card off, an emergency puts it back.”
15. “I have no savings, so one surprise bill ruins everything.”
16. “I paid it off once and ended up back in debt.”

Burnout halfway through

17. “I’ve been paying for months and it feels like nothing changed.”
18. “I’m tired of sacrificing with no end in sight.”
19. “I keep losing motivation and falling off my plan.”
20. “I don’t know when I’ll ever be debt-free.”

Math anxiety

21. “I’m terrible with numbers.”
22. “I can’t figure out the math on my own.”
23. “Budgeting confuses me.”

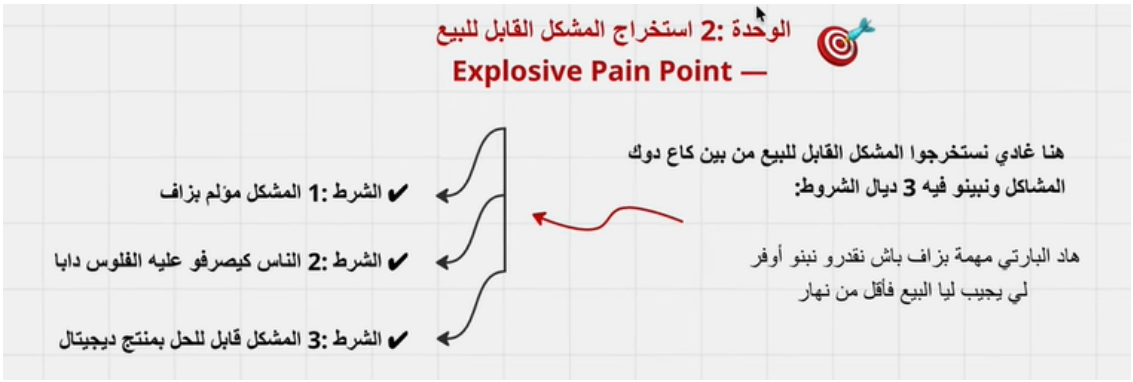

Couples

24. “My partner and I fight about money.”
25. “I’ve been hiding my debt from my spouse.”
26. “We’re not on the same page about paying it off.”

Tools that don’t work

27. “Spreadsheets are too complicated and break.”
28. “Apps cost too much or are too complicated.”
29. “I can’t see my progress, so it doesn’t feel real.”
30. “I don’t know how much to pay each paycheck.”

Tip: phrases 1, 5, 10, 14 and 17 make the strongest hooks for listing titles, Pinterest pins and TikTok captions.

Here are the micro-niches the ranking gives you, best first. The score is the average of their pains out of 9.

1. Paycheck-to-paycheck credit card payoff (8.3). Balance not going down, interest, minimums, no plan, how much to pay each paycheck. Product: a payoff planner built around each paycheck.
2. “Never back in debt again” (8.0). Surprise bills, emergencies putting the debt back, paying it off and slipping back. Product: an emergency buffer and sinking funds tracker, which is fully riba-free.
3. People juggling several credit cards (7.5). Too many cards to track, which one to pay first, minimums forever. Product: a snowball or avalanche order calculator.
4. Couples paying off debt together (7.3). Money fights, hidden debt, not on the same page. Product: a couples planner plus a money-talk guide.
5. “I’m bad with numbers” beginners (6.2). Math anxiety, budgeting confusion, conflicting advice, spreadsheets that break. Product: a no-math calculator that takes 5 minutes to set up.
6. Overwhelmed people who avoid looking at their debt (5.2). Drowning, panic, avoiding the bank app, shame. Product: a gentle starter guide plus a one-page tracker. These pains are emotional, so a product only partly solves them.
7. Halfway there and losing steam (4.8). Nothing seems to change, losing motivation, can’t see progress. Product: printable coloring trackers. It scores low here, but the celebration posts on Reddit suggest these printables sell well as add-ons.

Overlay for any of these: a version for Muslims leaving riba debt. It doesn't come from this ranking, but it could set your brand apart.

My recommendation: launch with #1. Give it a buffer tab from #2 and the card-order calculator from #3, then add #4 as your second product. All of these scores are my judgment from the Reddit findings, not sales data.

1- dream outcome : what is the result the client will see ?
2- how much will it take ?
3- is it easily applicable ?
4 - Is it going to work ?

1. Paycheck-to-paycheck credit card payoff
The dream: "I'm finally in control. I can see the end, and I can breathe again."

- You're not alone: Americans owe $1.26 trillion on credit cards, and more than 1 in 3 adults couldn't cover a surprise $400 bill with cash. It's not your fault. You just never had a clear plan.
- First results: in 5 minutes you see your debt-free date. On your next payday you know exactly what to pay. In your first month the balance starts dropping. In 2 to 3 months, many people pay off their first card.
- Simple: no math and one page, and it works on your phone. You type in your balances and the planner does the rest.
- It works: a Northwestern study of about 6,000 people found that paying the smallest debts first made people more likely to become debt-free. Your planner uses exactly that method.
  One-line promise: "Follow the plan every paycheck, and your debt has only one direction left: down."

2. Couples paying off debt together
The dream: "We're a team again. No secrets, no fights, one shared goal."

- You're not alone: 65% of couples say money is a top stress in their relationship. Fighting about money is normal. It doesn't mean your relationship is broken.
- First results: tonight, 15 minutes together gives you your shared debt-free date. This week you have your first calm money talk. In 2 to 3 months, many couples celebrate their first debt paid off.
- Simple: one shared planner on both your phones, no math and no blame, with a guided 15-minute monthly check-in.
- It works: it uses the same proven smallest-debt-first method, so you get early wins to celebrate together.
  One-line promise: "Stop fighting about money and start winning together."

Pack 1, The Paycheck Payoff System

- Base: a 7-tab planner covering your debts, payoff order, debt-free date, interest truth, a per-paycheck plan, a starter buffer and a progress dashboard.
- Execution: a First 7 Days checklist, a 10-minute payday ritual, a surprise bill protocol and creditor call scripts.
- Acceleration: a setup video, a pre-filled example, a list of 30 ways to find money, a “what if” slider and coloring trackers.
- Guarantee: “Debt-free date in 15 minutes or your money back”, plus 30-day refunds.

Pack 2, Debt-Free Together

- Base: everything in Pack 1, plus Mine/Yours/Ours tags, a fair split calculator, a fun money line and an “Our Why” goal.
- Execution: a guided first money talk, a kit for telling your partner about hidden debt, a weekly 15-minute check-in and couple rules.
- Acceleration: a setup video for two, a couple example and a two-color tracker.
- Guarantee: the same as Pack 1.

1) r/debtfree
Title: what you use for track your debt payoff?

> sorry for my english its not my first language. i see lot of post here about snowball and avalanche but nobody talk about the boring part. how you keep track every week? i tried doing it in excel and already feel tired lol. what you use and is there something you hate about it?

2) r/Debt
Title: how much from paycheck you put on debt?

> question for people who get paid every 2 week. how do you know how much you can put on the cards and still have enough money until next payday? you have some rule for this or it is more like guessing every time Sorry for my english btw

3) r/budget
Title: the “surprise” bills that is not really surprise

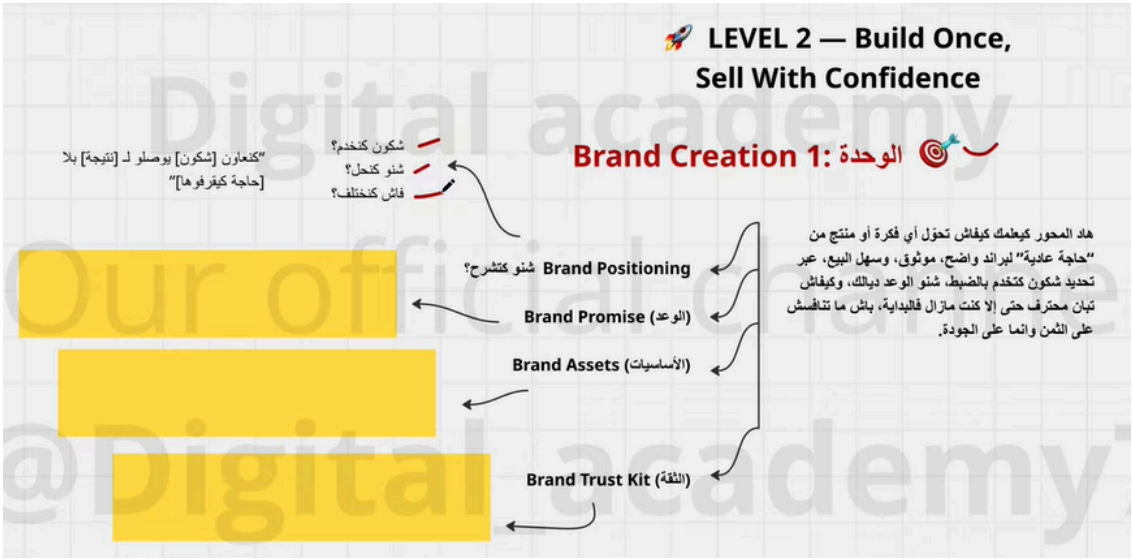

> my english is not so good sorry. car repair, new tires, christmas, the heating bill in winter.. we know they come every year but still it feel like surprise when they come. you save little bit for each one separate or one pot for all of them? and how you stop yourself to use this money for other things

4) r/Marriage (check the rules first)
Title: couples paying debt together, who keep track?

> sorry if my english is bad. i am curious how it work for couples. both of you look at the numbers or one person do everything and tell the other one? if you both see it what you use for this

5) r/DaveRamsey
Title: partner didnt want to start, what change their mind?

> excuse my english, still learning. i asked here before about couples fighting about money and many people say the real problem is when one person is all in and the other one not. for people who was in this situation what make your partner finally get on board?

Brand POSITIONNING

1. شكون كنخدم؟ ((Who do we serve?

US households living paycheck to paycheck who carry credit card debt. They pay every month, the balance barely moves, and one surprise bill puts them back to zero. Second group: couples, married or not, who are paying off debt together and keep fighting about it.

2. شنو كنحل؟ ((What do we solve?

• They don't know how much to put on debt each paycheck without being broke before the next payday.
• Every surprise bill (car, tires, doctor) goes back on the card.
• They can't see any progress, so they give up.
• For couples: one partner sees the numbers and the other doesn't, so every money talk becomes blame.

3. فاش كنختلف؟ ((What makes us different?

• The plan works per paycheck, not per month, the way people actually get paid.
• Buffer first, then the smallest debt. This is the order that worked for the people in the comments.
• No math, no shame. The sheet does all the calculations.
• Buy once, with no subscription, unlike EveryDollar and YNAB.
• Honest: we never push loans, balance transfers or card offers.
• For couples: the same numbers at the same time, without one partner checking up on the other.

We help paycheck-to-paycheck families become debt-free one paycheck at a time, without math stress, shame or a monthly subscription.

Brand Promise = result + time + ease (نتيجة + مدة + سهولة)

Pack 1, Paycheck Payoff:
• Result (نتيجة): calm on payday, knowing exactly where every paycheck goes and when you'll be debt-free.
• Time (مدة): your debt-free date in 15 minutes, and your full plan before your next payday.
• Ease (سهولة): no math, no complicated budget. You type your debts and the sheet does the rest.

> "Your debt-free date in 15 minutes and a plan for every paycheck, with no math and no complicated budget."

A shorter, more emotional version:

> "Stop dreading payday. Have your full payoff plan before your next paycheck, with zero math."

Pack 2, Debt-Free Together:
• Result: no more fights about money, with one plan you both agree on.
• Time: in one evening (your first money date).
• Ease: no blame, no complicated apps, just the same numbers in front of both of you.

> "Stop fighting about money: one shared payoff plan you both agree on in one evening, with no blame and no complicated apps."

These times are ones the product can actually deliver: the 15-minute setup, the plan by the next payday, and one evening for the first talk. I avoided "debt-free in 30 days" because nobody can guarantee that, and it would bring refunds and bad reviews. The 15-minute promise also matches our guarantee (debt-free date in 15 minutes or your money back).

Which version of the Pack 1 promise do you prefer, the clear one or the emotional one?

Slogan: “PaidInYellow, one paycheck at a time.”

Couples line: “PaidInYellow Together”

Font

Body text: Inter (keep it)

- Very easy to read, even small on a phone.
- Every number has the same width, so the columns in the planner line up cleanly, like a real pay stub.
- It's free and it works inside Google Sheets (Format › Font › More fonts).

Headings: Bricolage Grotesque (instead of Poppins)

- It's friendly, warm and a bit different, so it doesn't read as a template.
- It still looks clean and serious enough for money.

Small accent, optional: Caveat (handwriting)

- Only for little notes like "paid ✓" or "you did it" next to the yellow highlight.
- It feels like someone marked their own pay stub with a pen. Never use it for full sentences.

Rules

- Main text in blue ink #1F2A44, size 16px or more on the web.
- Numbers always in Inter.

This choice is reasoned, not researched: I picked it to fit the concept and for readability. I can make an image of the palette with these fonts so you can see them together, if you want.

See doc :
https://docs.google.com/document/d/1AK5fLe2nmyYycnfMwGDYRTdCq4xKCjzrrNF77YKePyQ/edit?usp=sharing

My pick:

- A, “paid in yellow” with “yellow” highlighted. This is the main logo, and it shows the brand idea in one glance.
- D2, the pay stub with a highlighted, checked line. This is the profile icon for Etsy, TikTok, Instagram and the favicon, and it reads clearly even at tiny sizes.
- D1 (the “p”) works, but it’s less clear than D2 when it’s small.

All the files, SVG and PNG, are in the brand/logo folder:

- Wordmark: light, dark and transparent background
- Wordmark with the slogan
- Both icons

Bricolage Grotesque and Caveat are free for commercial use (Open Font License).

If you want changes, like a different tilt on the highlight, a color tweak, or the name written as “PaidInYellow” in one word, tell me and I’ll update the files.

paid in yellow

one paycheck at a time.

Use our blue ink #1F2A44, not black

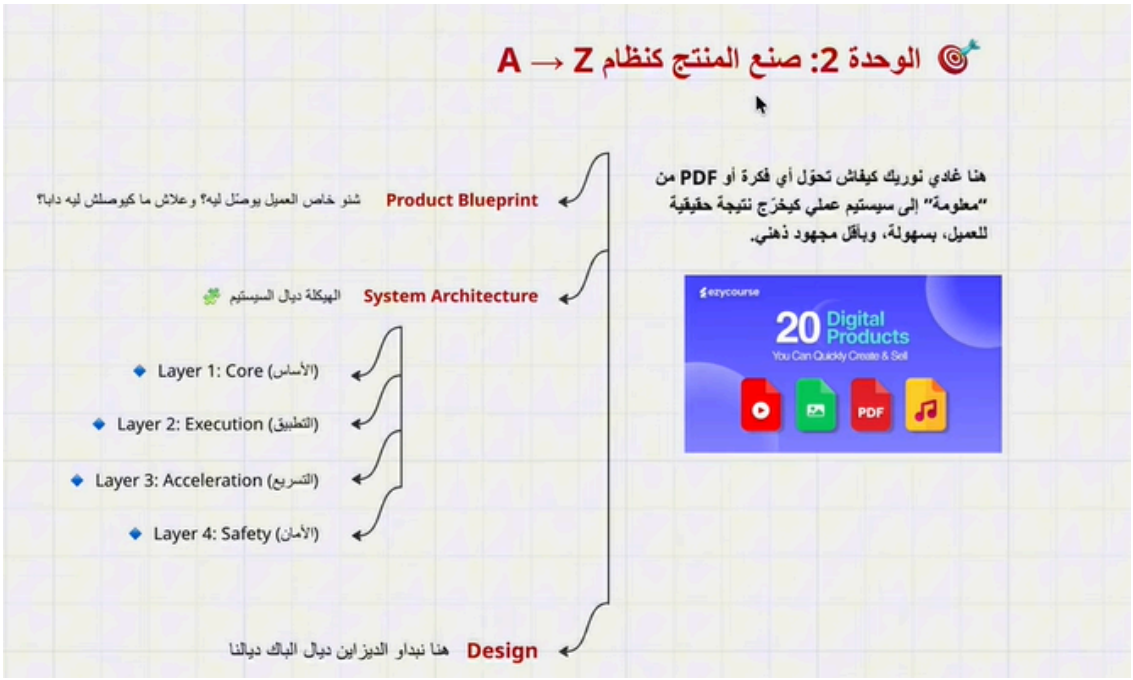

Watch out: they also use a cream background with yellow highlights, which is close to our look. To stay different:

- Use our blue ink #1F2A44, not black
- Use yellow only to mean “paid” (behind paid amounts and rows), not as decoration
- Use Bricolage Grotesque, not their serif
- Use pay-stub visuals
- Put “per paycheck” in our headlines, e.g. “See what to pay this payday”

—----------

Where they’re weak (our angle):

- Monthly only, with no per-paycheck plan
- No buffer and no surprise bills
- No couples version
- Google Sheets only, while we offer the app plus a sheet

Pack 1: The Paycheck Payoff System

Problem paragraph:
Millions of families live paycheck to paycheck with credit card debt. They pay every month, but the balance never goes down, because interest eats most of the payment. They have no plan for how much to pay each payday, and one surprise bill sends them back to zero. Over time the debt becomes a trap: they avoid looking at the numbers, feel ashamed, overwhelmed and stuck, and dread payday.

Problem words → opposite words

- paycheck to paycheck → one paycheck ahead
- balance never goes down → watching the balance drop
- interest eats my payments → every dollar hits the debt
- no plan / where do I start → a clear plan for every paycheck
- surprise bill → back to zero → buffer ready, a surprise is just an annoyance
- drowning / overwhelmed → in control, calm
- trap / stuck → a way out, moving forward
- avoid looking / ashamed → proud to check the numbers
- bad with math / spreadsheets too complicated → no math, done for you
- dread payday → look forward to payday

- minimums forever → a debt-free date on the calendar
- back in debt again → this time it sticks

Pack 2: Debt-Free Together

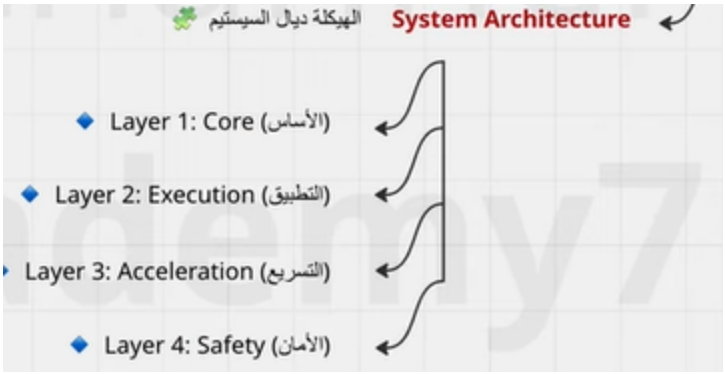

Problem paragraph:
Many couples fight about money because only one partner sees the numbers. The other feels policed or in the dark. Money talks come as surprises and feel like an attack, and they end in blame and resentment. Sometimes there's hidden debt. One partner is not on board, and the saver and the spender pull in opposite directions, so the debt stays the same and the trust wears down.

Problem words → opposite words

- fights / arguing → calm money dates
- blame → it just becomes math
- one of us sees the numbers → same numbers, same time
- policed / watched → trust, no-ask money
- ambushed / attack → a set money date, no surprises
- hidden debt / secrets → everything on the table, no shame
- not on board → working together, one team
- saver vs spender → still opposites, but working together
- resentment / unfair 50/50 → a fair split by income
- giving up everything fun → fun money kept
- stuck, the debt isn't moving → the fights shrink when the debt does

How to use them:

- The problem words go at the top of listings, posts and hooks, so buyers recognize themselves ("Paying every month but the balance never goes down?").
- The opposite words go in the promise, product names, tab names and headlines ("Watch your balance drop, one paycheck at a time").

PaidInYellow system summary

Pack 1: The Paycheck Payoff System

4. Safety: Our Money Agreement (fillable PDF) and the couples guarantee.

pack1-expert-review-layers-1-4

An Honest Review :

Honest answer: the system is well organized. But I can't give you a real success percentage. Nobody has data for a brand that hasn't launched, and any number I gave would be made up.

What I can give you is a scorecard. This is my own judgment, not a statistic:

Part	Score	Why
Fits the real problem	9/10	Every product answers a pain that real people described on Reddit
Organization (the 4 layers)	8/10	Each layer has a clear job; Core sells on its own
Difference from competitors	7/10	Etsy already has lots of debt payoff sheets. Our edge is per paycheck, buffer first, couples and no subscription
Ready to launch	3/10	Nothing is built yet
Traffic plan	3/10	Not done yet, and this is the biggest risk

What's strong:

- It's a real system, not just an ebook.
- The formats are mixed.
- The Core works alone, and everything else adds to it.
- The guarantee lowers the risk for buyers.

What I'd change:

1. It's too big for v1. 12 products is a lot before the first sale. Launch Pack 1 lean:
    - The planner
    - The 7-Day Challenge, with the Payday Ritual merged into it
    - The tracker kit
    - The short guide
2. Add the video after launch, then Pack 2 once Pack 1 sells.

3. The audio and video are the most work for the least extra value. They're good to have, so keep them for later versions.

4. Success will depend on traffic more than on the product. The free calculator, Pinterest pins, short faceless videos and Etsy SEO decide whether people find you. That's the next part to plan.

The real way to get a "percentage": launch the lean version, then measure. Track views to sales on Etsy (1 to 3% is normal), how many calculator users leave their email, and your refund rate. After about 2 weeks you'll have real numbers instead of guesses.

PaidInYellow: Competitor Summary and How We Beat Them

Based on the listing images and videos of 4 brands Azeddin captured on Etsy (14 Oct 2026). Prices and sales numbers come from the screenshots; everything under "how we beat them" is our reasoned plan, not tested yet.

1. The 4 brands at a glance

Brand	Format	Strength	Weakness
HayeCreativesCo (Bestseller, shop 96K sales, ~$5)	Google Sheet, 1 tab	Planned vs actual, log for new charges, rollover, YouTube tutorial QR	Monthly only, no buffer, no couples, Sheets only
My Productive Life Co (55,000+ customers, 4.8 stars)	Google Sheets + Excel	Social proof, auto-sort, per-debt "paid by" date, Amount +/- column, currency by country	Dense tiny-text sheet, unreadable 15-slice pie, hard on phone
AY Studios (~$6.90, new, few reviews)	Real web app: offline HTML file + online synced version	6 methods + compare, what-if, milestones, calendar + reminders, dark mode, one-time price	Too many screens for a stressed beginner, pushes balance transfers and consolidation loans, no buffer, no couples
This Girl Budgets (UK)	25-page printable PDF, A4, £	Emotional, motivating copy on every page, "all pages" grid, cross-sell	No math at all, £ and A4 only, women-only, generic AI art

2. Must-have features (everyone has these, buyers expect them)

- Snowball, avalanche and custom order, sorted automatically
- Many debts: unlimited in the app, 50 in the Google Sheet (beat their 40)
- Any debt type (cards, store cards, car, student, BNPL) with balance, rate, minimum, due day
- Country/currency picker
- Dashboard: total owed, paid so far, % paid, debt-free date, months left, interest paid, this month's payment
- Full payment schedule, month by month, per debt; past months crossed off (ours: highlighted yellow = paid)

- Planned vs actual payments, plus "Amount +/-" for extra or missed payments
- Log for new charges and fees (real life is not perfect)
- Extra monthly amount + rollover of freed-up payments
- Simple chart of progress (balance going down)
- Works on phone, tablet and computer; short video tutorial

3. Best ideas to copy (and make ours)

- From Haye: planned vs actual, new-charges log, rollover toggle, YouTube tutorial QR inside the listing.
- From My Productive Life: real review screenshots + a big social proof number (once we have reviews), a 10-second screen recording with 5 captions.
- From AY Studios: offline file + optional online version, "Attack this one now" card, what-if slider, one-off windfall, milestones path, calendar reminders (.ics), same footer line on every listing image, 15-second "real footage" video.
- From This Girl Budgets: one short warm line on every printable page, "Wobble? Reset" page, "Remember your why" page, one image showing every page in a grid, last image cross-selling the bigger pack.

4. Where all 4 are weak (our openings)

- Nobody plans per paycheck. They think in months. Our users get paid weekly or every 2 weeks. "This payday, pay $150 to Card A" does not exist anywhere.
- Nobody protects against the surprise bill. No buffer-first step, no sinking funds. That is the #1 reason people fall back (Reddit).
- Nobody serves couples. Zero shared plans.
- Too complex or too empty. Sheets are dense, AY has 15 screens, the printable has no math. Nobody gives "one clear next step".
- They push borrowing. AY suggests balance transfers and consolidation loans. We never do: a halal and trust difference.
- Weak brand. Generic pastels, stickers and AI art. Nobody owns a clear idea like "yellow = paid".

5. How we beat them: our product (Pack 1)

Core: Paycheck Payoff Planner (offline app + Google Sheet bonus)

- Home screen = one next step: "This payday: put $150 on Card A." Big, calm, nothing else needed.
- Pay frequency built in: weekly, every 2 weeks, twice a month, monthly. The whole schedule follows paydays, not months.

- Buffer first: the plan fills a starter buffer (e.g. $500) before extra payments. "Find your first $500" helper.
- Predictable surprises: small sinking funds (car, school, gifts) taken from each paycheck.
- 3 methods, not 6: PaidInYellow order (buffer, then smallest first) as default, avalanche and custom as options, with a simple comparison: "Avalanche saves $140 but takes the same 27 months." Simpler than AY, still informed.
- Everything they have that matters: dashboard, schedule, planned vs actual, new-charges log, what-if slider, windfall, milestones, calendar file, CSV/backup export, dark mode.
- Yellow = paid: every paid payment and paid month gets highlighted yellow. Our visual signature.
- Private: offline, no account, no bank login. Data stays on the phone.
- Never: balance transfers, 0% cards, consolidation or any loan suggestion.

Other layers (what competitors do not bundle)

- 7-Day Debt Reset (PDF + email) with payday ritual
- Debt-Free Tracker Kit: coloring trackers + phone wallpapers, one warm line per page, US Letter AND A4, any currency
- Never Back in Debt Guide + PaidInYellow Promise
- Pack 2 later: Debt-Free Together (couples, shared plan)

6. How we beat them: the listing

10 images, same footer on every one: "Paycheck plan · App + Sheet + Printables · One-time price, no subscription".

#	Image	Main line
1	Thumbnail: phone + laptop, badges (App + Google Sheet, Works offline, Video tutorial, One-time price)	Know exactly what to pay this payday
2	The promise + the problem	Your debt-free date in 15 minutes. No math, no shame.
3	Per-paycheck plan screen	A plan for every paycheck, weekly or biweekly
4	Buffer + surprise bills	One surprise bill won't send you back to zero
5	Methods + simple comparison	Smallest first, biggest interest first, or your own order
6	Dashboard with yellow paid highlights	Watch it turn yellow, one payment at a time
7	What-if slider + find your first $500	See how $50 more changes your date
8	Grid of all printables	Plus printable trackers and a 7-day reset

9	How it works 1-2-3 + devices + privacy	No account, no bank login, works offline
10	Promise + support (reviews when we have them)	15-minute setup or your money back

Video: 15 seconds, real screen recording of the app with 5 captions: "Add your debts" → "Pick your payday" → "See this payday's plan" → "Watch it turn yellow" → "Debt-free date: [month]". End card: "One-time price, no subscription".

7. Price position

- Etsy competitors sell at about $3-10 after 40-75% sales. We will not win on price there.
- Etsy (front door): Core planner only, priced like the market during launch to get first reviews.
- Shopify (main): full Pack 1 bundle (app + sheet + printables + guide), $19-39, because it is a full system, not one sheet.

8. What we deliberately do NOT copy

- Balance transfer / consolidation simulators (AY)
- Credit score tracker (AY): pulls focus toward borrowing; maybe later as a simple note, not v1 (our reasoning, not tested)
- 6 methods and 15 screens: more choice = more stress for our buyer
- Sassy, women-only tone (This Girl Budgets): we stay calm, warm and for everyone
- Fake urgency or "guaranteed" results

9. One-line positioning vs competitors

They show you a spreadsheet of your debt. PaidInYellow tells you what to pay this payday, protects you from the next surprise bill, and turns every paid payment yellow.
